

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Mother Goose for grown folks

Adeline Dutton Train Whitney, Augustus Hoppin, Hammatt Billings

Hoppin

The Arthur and Elizabeth SCHLESINGER LIBRARY on the History of Women in America

4441
33

A CHRISTMAS READING.

A CHRISTMAS READING.

MOTHER GOOSE

FOR

GROWN FOLKS.

BY

MRS. A. D. T. WHITNEY,

AUTHOR OF FAITH GARTNEY'S GIRLHOOD, ETC.

A New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition.

ILLUSTRATED BY AUGUSTUS HOPPIN AND HAMMATT BILLINGS.

LORING, Publisher,

319 WASHINGTON STREET,

BOSTON.

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year 1870, by
A. K. LORING,
In the office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington.

811

W61

3M

Rockwell & Churchill, Printers, Boston.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Introductory	1
Brahmic	6
Little Boy Blue	9
Hicory, Dicory, Dock	13
Bo-Peep	18
Solomon Grundy	21
Bowls	23
Cradled in Green	27
"Similia Similibus"	30
Hobby-Horses	34
Missions	36
Going Back to our Muttons	40
Going to Dover	44
Rags and Robes	47
Blackbirds	52
Banbury Cross	57
Attic Salt	62
The Big Shoe	65
Victuals and Drink	70
Cobwebs and Brooms	76
Black Spiders	79

IV

CONTENTS.

Daffy-Down-Dilly	81
Baa, Baa, Black Sheep	84
The Twister	86
Fantasy	88
Jingling and Jangling	92
The Old Woman of Surrey	97
Piekle Peppers	100
Humpty Dumpty	102
Sunday and Monday, ...	106
The Mad Horse	109
Jack Horner	113
Inty, Minty	119
Doubles and Bubbles	122
Funeral Holiday	125
Disrobed	129
Jack and Jill	133
Casus Belli	136
The Days that are Long	138
Threescore and Ten	140
Conclusion	142

INTRODUCTORY.

SOMEWHERE in that uncertain "long ago,"

Whose dim and vague chronology is all
That elfin tales or nursery fables know,
Rose a rare spirit, — keen, and quick, and quaint, —

Whom by the title, whether fact or feint,
Mythic or real, Mother Goose we call.

Of Momus and Minerva sprang the birth
That gave the laughing oracle to earth :

A brimming bowl she bears, that, frothing high

With sparkling nonsense, seemeth nonsense all;

Till, the bright, floating syllabub blown by,
Lo, in its ruby splendor doth upshine

The crimson radiance of Olympian wine

By Pallas poured, in Jove's own banquethall.

The world was but a baby when she came ;
So to her songs it listened, and her name
Grew to a word of power, her voice a spell
With charm to soothe its infant wearying well.

But, in a later and maturer age,
Developed to a dignity more sage,
Having its Shakspeares and its Words-
worths now,

Its Southseys and its Tennysons, to wear
A halo on the high and lordly brow,
Or poet-laurels in the waving hair ;
Its Lowells, Whittiers, Longfellows, to sing
Ballads of beauty, like the notes of spring,
The wise and prudent ones to nursery use
Leave the dear lyrics of old Mother Goose.

Wisdom of babes, — the nursery Shakspeare still, —

Cackles she ever with the same good-will :
Uttering deep counsels in a foolish guise,
That come as warnings, even to the wise ;
As when, of old, the martial city slept,
Unconscious of the wily foe that crept
Under the midnight, till the alarm was heard
Out from the mouth of Rome's plebeian bird.

Full many a rare and subtile thing hath she,

Undreamed of in the world's philosophy :
Toss-balls for children hath she humbly rolled,

That shining jewels secretly enfold ;
Sibylline leaves she casteth on the air,
Twisted in fool's-caps, blown unheeded by,
That, in their lines grotesque, albeit, bear
Words of grave truth, and signal prophecy ;
And lurking satire, whose sharp lashes hit
A world of follies with their homely wit ;
With here and there a roughly uttered hint,
That makes you wonder at the beauty
in't ;

As if, along the wayside's dusty edge,
A hot-house flower had blossomed in a hedge.

So, like brave Layard in old Nineveh,
Among the memories of ancient song,
As curious relics, I would fain bestir ;
And gather, if it might be, into strong
 And shapely show, some wealth of its lost lore ;
Fragments of Truth's own architecture,
 strewed
In forms disjointed, whimsical, and rude,
That yet, to simpler vision, grandly stood Complete, beneath the golden light of yore !

BRAHMIC.

If a great poet think he sings,
Or if the poem think it's sung,
They do but sport the scattered plumes
That Mother Goose aside hath flung.

Far or forgot to me is near:
Shakspeare and Punch are all the same;
The vanished thoughts do reappear,
And shape themselves to fun or fame.

They use my quills, and leave me out,
Oblivious that I wear the wings;

Or that a Goose has been about,
When every little gosling sings.

Strong men may strive for grander thought,
But, six times out of every seven,
My old philosophy hath taught
All they can master this side heaven.

LITTLE BOY BLUE.

"Little boy blue! come blow your horn!
The sheep in the meadow, the cows in the corn!
Where's little boy blue, that looks after the sheep?
He's under the hay-mow, fast asleep!"

OF morals in novels, we've had not a few;
With now and then novel moralities too;
And we've weekly exhortings from pulpit
to pew;
But it strikes me,—and so it may chance to strike you,— Scarce any are better than "Little Boy Blue."

For the veteran dame knows her business right well,

And her quaint admonitions unerringly
tell:

She strings a few odd, careless words in a jingle,

And the sharp, latent truth fairly makes your ears tingle.

“Azure-robed Youth!” she cries, “up to thy post!

And watch, lest thy wealth be all scattered and lost:

Silly thoughts are astray, beyond call of the horn,

And passion breaks loose, and gets into the corn!

Is this the way Conscience looks after her sheep?

In the world's soothing shadow, gone soundly asleep?"

Is n't that, now, a sermon? No lengthened vexation

Of heads, and divisions, and argumentation,

But a straightforward leap to the sure application;

And, though many a longer harangue is forgot,

Of which careful reporters take notes on the spot,

I think, — as the "Deacon" declared of his
"shay,"

Put together for lasting for ever and aye, —
A like immortality holding in view,
The old lady's discourse will undoubtedly “dew”!

HICCORY, DICCORY, DOCK.

“ Hiccory, diccory, dock !

The mouse ran up the clock.

The clock struck one, and down she run :

Hiccory, diccory, dock ! ”

SHE had her simple nest in a safe and cunning place,

Away down in the quiet of the deep, old-fashioned case.

A little crevice nibbled out led forth into the world,

And overhead, on busy wheels, the hours and minutes whirled.

High up in mystic glooms of space was awful scenery

Of wires, and weights, and springs, and all great Time's machinery ;

14 HICCORY, DICCORY, DOCK.

But she had nought to do with these; a blessed little mouse,
Whose only care beneath the sun was just
to keep her house.

For this was all she knew, or could; without her, just the same
The earth's great centre drew the weight;
the pendulum went and came;
And days were born, and grew, and died;
and stroke by stroke were told
The hours by which the world and men are ever growing old.

It suddenly occurred to her, — it struck her all at once, —
That living among things of power, herself had been a dunce.

"Somebody winds the clock!" she cried.

"Somebody comes and brings
An iron finger that feels through and fumbles at the springs;

"And then it happens; then the buzz is stirred afar and near,
And the hour sounds, and everywhere the great world stops to hear.

I don't think, after all, it seems so hard a thing to do.

I know the way — I might run up and make folks listen too."

She sprang upon the leaden weight; but not the merest whit

Did all her added gravity avail to hurry it.
She clambered up the steady cord; it wavered not a hair.

She got among the earnest wheels; they knew not she was there.

16 HICCORY, DICCORY, DOCK.

She sat beside the silent bell; the patient hammer lay

Waiting an unseen bidding for the word that it should say.

Only a solemn whisper thrilled the chambers of the clock,

And the mouse listened: "Hiccory! hic — diccory! dic — dock!"

Something was coming. She had hit the ripeness of the time;

No tiny second was outreached by that exultant climb;

In no wise did the planet turn the faster to the sun;

She only met the instant, but the great clock sounded — "One!"

What then? Did she stand gloriously
among those central things,
Her eye upon the vibrant bell, her heel
upon the springs?
Was her soul grand in unison with that resounding chime,
And her pulse-beat identical with the high pulse of Time?

Ah, she was little! When the air first shattered with that shock,
Down ran the mouse into her hole. "Hic,
diccory! dic — dock!"
Too plain to be translated is the truth the tale would show,
Small souls, in solemn upshot, had better wait below.

BO-PEEP.

“Little Bo-Peep
Has lost her sheep,
And does n't know where to find 'em;
Let 'em alone,
And they 'll come home,
And bring their tails behind 'em.”

HOPE beckoned Youth, and bade him keep,
On Life's broad plain, his shining sheep,
And while along the sward they came,
He called them over, each by name;
This one was Friendship,—that was Health;
Another Love,—another Wealth;

One, fat, full-fleeced, was Social Station ;
Another, stainless, Reputation ;
In truth, a goodly flock of sheep,—
A goodly flock, but hard to keep.

Youth laid him down beside a fountain ;
Hope spread his wings to scale a mountain ;
And, somehow, Youth fell fast asleep,
And left his crook to tend the sheep :
No wonder, as the legend says,
They took to very crooked ways.

He woke — to hear a distant bleating, —
The faithless quadrupeds were fleeing !

Wealth vanished first, with stealthy tread,
Then Friendship followed — to be fed, —
And foolish Love was after led ;

Fair Fame, — alas ! some thievish scamp
Had marked him with his own black stamp !
And he, with Honor at his heels,
Was out of sight across the fields.

Health just hangs doubtful, — distant Hope
Looks backward from the mountain slope, —
And Youth himself — no longer Youth —
Stands face to face with bitter Truth.

Yet let them go ! 'T were all in vain
To linger here in faith to find 'em ;
Forward ! — nor pause to think of pain, —
Till somewhere, on a nobler plain,
A surer Hope shall lead the train
Of joys withheld to come again
With golden fleeces trailed behind 'em !

SOLOMON GRUNDY.

"Solomon Grundy
Born on Monday,
Christened on Tuesday,
Married on Wednesday,
Sick on Thursday,
Worse on Friday,
Dead on Saturday,
Buried on Sunday :
This was the end
Of Solomon Grundy."

So sings the unpretentious Muse
That guidès the quill of Mother Goose,
And in one week of mortal strife
Presents the epitome of Life :

But down sits Billy Shakspeare next,
And, coolly taking up the text,
His thought pursues the trail of mine,
And, lo! the "Seven Ages" shine!
O world! O critics! can't you see
How Shakspeare plagiarizes me?

And other bards will after come,
To echo in a later age,
"He lived, — he died: behold the sum,
The abstract of the historian's page";—
Yet once for all the thing was done,
Complete in Grundy's pilgrimage.

For not a child upon the knee
But hath the moral learned of me;
And measured, in a seven days' span,
The whole experience of man.

BOWLS.

“Three wise men of Gotham
Went to sea in a bowl :
If the bowl had been stronger,
My song had been longer.”

MYSTERIOUSLY suggestive! A vague hint,
Yet a rare touch of most effective art,
That of the bowl, and all the voyagers in 't,
Tells nothing, save the fact that they did start.

There ending suddenly, with subtle craft,
The story stands,—as 't were a broken shaft,—

More eloquent in mute signification,
Than lengthened detail, or precise relation.
So perfect in its very non-achieving,
That, of a truth, I cannot help believing
A rash attempt at paraphrasing it
May prove a blunder, rather than a hit.

Still, I must wish the venerable soul
Had been explicit as regards the bowl.
Was it, perhaps, a railroad speculation?
Or a big ship to carry all creation,
That, by some kink of its machinery,
Failed, in the end, to carry even three?
Or other fond, erroneous calculation
Of splendid schemes that died disastrously?

It must have been of Gotham manufacture;
Though strangely weak, and liable to fracture.

Yet — pause a moment — strangely, did I say ?

Scarcely, since, after all, it was but clay ; —
The stuff Hope takes to build her brittle boat,

And therein sets the wisest men afloat.

Truly, a bark would need be somewhat stronger,

To make the halting history much longer.

Doubtless, the good Dame did but generalize, —

Took a broad glance at human enterprise,

And earthly expectation, and so drew,

In pithy lines, a parable most true, —

Kindly to warn us ere we sail away,

With life's great venture, in an ark of clay,

Where shivered fragments all around be-token,
How even the "golden bowl" at last lies broken!

CRADLED IN GREEN.

“Rockaby, baby,
Your cradle is green;
Father’s a nobleman,
Mother’s a queen;
And Betty’s a lady,
And wears a gold ring,
And Johnny’s a drummer,
And drums for the king!”

O GOLDEN gift of childhood!
That, with its kindly touch,
Transforms to more than royalty
The thing it loveth much!

O second sight, bestowed alone
Upon the baby seer,
That the glory held in Heaven's reserve
Discerneth even here!

Though he be the humblest craftsman,
No silk nor ermine piled
Could make the father seem a whit
More noble to the child;
And the mother,—ah, what queenlier crown
Could rest upon her brow,
Than the fair and gentle dignity
It weareth to him now?

E'en the gilded ring that Michael
For a penny fairing bought,
Is the seal of Betty's ladyhood
To his untutored thought;

And the darling drum about his neck,—
His very newest toy,—
A bandsman unto Majesty
Hath straightway made the boy!

O golden gift of childhood!
If the talisman might last,
How the dull Present still should gleam
With the glory of the Past!
But the things of earth about us
Fade and dwindle as we go,
And the long perspective of our life
Is truth, and not a show!

"SIMILIA SIMILIBUS."

"There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise:
He jumped into a bramble-bush,
And scratched out both his eyes.
But when he saw his eyes were out,
With all his might and main
He jumped into another bush,
And scratched them in again!"

OLD Dr. Hahnemann read the tale,
(And he was wondrous wise,)
Of the man who, in the bramble-bush,
Had scratched out both his eyes.

And the fancy tickled mightily
His misty German brain,
That, by jumping in another bush,
He got them back again.

So he called it "homo-hop-athy".
And soon it came about,
That a curious crowd among the thorns
Was hopping in and out.
Yet, disguise it by the longest name
They may, it is no use ;
For the world knows the discovery
Was made by Mother Goose !

And not alone in medicine
Doth the theory hold good :
In Life and in Philosophy,
The maxim still hath stood :

A morsel more of anything,
When one has got enough,
And Nature's energy disowns
The whole unkindly stuff

A second negative affirms;
And two magnetic poles
Of charge identical, repel,—
As sameness sunders souls.
Touched with a first, fresh suffering,
All solace is despised;
But gathered sorrows grow serene,
And grief is neutralized.

And he who, in the world's mêlée,
Hath chanced the worse to catch,
May mend the matter, if he come
Back, boldly, to the scratch;

Minding the lesson he received

In boyhood, from his mother,

Whose cheery word, for many a bump,

Was, Up and take another!

HOBBY-HORSES.

"I had a little pony,
His name was Dapple Gray:
I lent him to a lady
To ride a mile away.
She whipped him,
She lashed him,
She rode him through the mire;
I would n't lend my pony now,
For all the lady's hire."

OUR hobbies, of whatever sort
They be, mine honest friend,
Of fancy, enterprise, or thought,
'Tis hardly wise to lend.

Some fair imagination, shrined
In form poetic, maybe,
You fondly trusted to the World,—
That most capricious Lady.

Or a high, romantic theory,
Magnificently planned,
In flush of eager confidence
You bade her take in hand.

But she whipped it, and she lashed it,
And bespattered it with mire,
Till your very soul felt stained within,
And scourged with stripes of fire.

Yet take this thought, and hold it fast,
Ye Martyrs of To-day!
That same great World, with all its scorn,
You've lifted on its way!

MISSIONS.

"Hogs in the garden,—

Catch 'em, Towser!

Cows in the cornfield,—

Run, boys, run!

Fire on the mountains,—

Run, boys, run boys!

Cats in the cream-pot,—

Run, girls, run!"

I don't stand up for Woman's Right;

Not I,—no, no!

The real lionesses fight,—

I let it go.

Yet, somehow, as I catch the call
Of the world's voice,
That speaks a summons unto all
Its girls and boys ;

In such strange contrast still it rings
As church-bells' bome
To the pert sound of tinkling things
One hears at home ;
And wakes an impulse, not germane
Perhaps, to woman,
Yet with a thrill that makes it plain
'T is truly human ;—

A sudden tingle at the springs
Of noble feeling,
The spirit-power for valiant things
Clearly revealing.

But Eden's curse doth daily deal
Its certain dole,—
And the old grasp upon the heel
Holds back the soul!

So, when some rousing deed's to do,
To save a nation,
Or, on the mountains, to subdue
A conflagration,
Woman! the work is not for you;
Mind your vocation!
Out from the cream-pot comes a mew
Of tribulation!

Meekly the world's great exploits leave
Unto your betters;
So bear the punishment of Eve,
Spirit in fetters!

Only, the hidden fires will glow,
And, now and then,
A beacon blazeth out below
That startles men!

Some Joan, through battle-field to stake,
Danger embracing;
Some Florence, for sweet mercy's sake
Pestilence facing;
Whose holy valor vindicates
The royal birth
That, for its crowning, only waits
The end of earth;
And, haply, when we all stand freed,
In strength immortal,
Such virgin-lamps the host shall lead
Through heaven's portal!

GOING BACK TO OUR MUTTONS

“There was an old man of Tobago,
Who lived on rice, gruel, and sago,
Till, much to his bliss,
His physician said this :
To a leg, sir, of mutton, you may go.
He set a monkey to baste the mutton,
And ten pounds of butter he put on.”

“CHAIN up a child, and away he will go” ;
I have heard of the proverb interpreted so ;
The spendthrift is son to the miser,—and still,
When the Devil would work his most pitiless will,

He sends forth the seven, for such embassies kept,

To the house that is empty and garnished and swept:

For poor human nature a pendulum seems,
That must constantly vibrate between two extremes.

The closer the arrow is drawn to the bow,

Once slipped from the string, all the further
't will go:

Let a panic arise in the world of finance,
And the mad flight of Fashion be checked
by the chance,

It certainly seems a most wonderful thing,
When the ropes are let go again, how it will swing!

And even the decent observance of Lent,
Stirs sometimes a doubt how the time has been spent,
When Easter brings out the new bonnets and gowns,
And a flood of gay colors o'erflows in the towns.

So in all things the feast doth still follow
 the fast,
And the force of the contrast gives zest to the last ;
And until he is tried, no frail mortal can tell,
The inch being offered, he won't take the ell.
We are righteously shocked at the follies of fashion ;

Nay, standing outside, may get quite in a passion

At the prodigal flourishes other folks put on :

But many good people this side of Tobago,
If respited once from their diet of sago,
Would outdo the monkey in basting the mutton !

GOING TO DOVER.

“ Leg over leg
As the dog went to Dover ;
When he came to a stile,
Jump he went over.”

PERHAPS you would n't see it here,
But, to my fancy, 't is quite clear
That Mother Goose just meant to show
How the dog Patience on doth go :
With steadfast nozzle, pointing low, —
Leg over leg, however slow, —
And labored breath, but naught complaining,
Still, at each footstep, somewhat gaining, —

Quietly plodding, mile on mile,
And gathering for a nervous bound
At every interposing stile,—
So traversing the tedious ground,
Till all, at length, he measures over.
And walks, a victor, into Dover.

And, verily, no other way
Doth human progress win the day;
Step after step,—and o'er and o'er,—
Each seeming like the one before,
So that 't is only once a while,—
When sudden Genius springs the stile
That marks a section of the plain,
Beyond whose bound fresh fields again
'Their widening stretch untrodden sweep,—
The world looks round to see the leap.

Pale Science, in her laboratory,
Works on with crucible and wire
Unnoticed, till an instant glory
Crowns some high issue, as with fire,
And men, with wondering eyes awide,
Gauge great Invention's giant stride.

No age, no race, no single soul,
By lofty tumbling gains the goal.
The steady pace it keeps between,—
The little points it makes unseen,—
By these, achieved in gathering might,
It moveth on, and out of sight,
And wins, through all that's overpast,
The city of its hopes at last.

RAGS AND ROBES.

“Hark, hark!

The dogs do bark;

Beggars are coming to town:

Some in rags,

Some in tags,

And some in velvet gowns!”

COMING, coming always!

Crowding into earth;

Seizing on this human life,

Beggars from the birth.

Some in patent penury ;
Some, alas ! in shame ;
And some in fading velvet
Of hereditary fame ;

But all in deep, appeaseless want,
As mendicants to live ;
And go beseeching through the world,
For what the world may give.

Beggars, beggars, all of us !
Expectants from our youth :
With hands outstretched, and asking alms
Of Hope and Love and Truth.

Nor, verily, doth he escape
Who, wrapt in cold contempt,
Denies alike to give or take,
And dreams himself exempt ;

Who never, in appeal to man,
Nor in a prayer to Heaven,
Will own that aught he doth desire,
Or ask that aught be given.

Whose human heart a stoic pride
Folds as a velvet pall;
Yet hides a meagreness within,
Worse beggary than all!

Coming, coming always!
And the bluff Apostle waits
As the throng pours upward from the earth
To Heaven's eternal gates.

In shreds of torn affection,
In passion-rended rags;

While scarcely at the portal
The great procession flags ;

For the pillared doors of glory
On their hinges hang awide ;
Where each asking soul may enter,
And at last be satisfied !

But a cold, calm shade arriveth,
In self-complacent trim,—
And Peter riseth up to see
Especially to him.

“ Good morrow, saint ! I ’m going in
To take a stroll, you know ;
Not that I want for anything,—
But just to see the show ! ”

“ Hold ! ” thunders out the warden,
“ Be pleased to pause a bit ! ”

For seats celestial, let me say,
You're not apparelled fit:
Yonder's the brazen door that leads Spectators to the pit!

Whatever may be thought on earth,
We've other rules in heaven;
And only poverty confessed
Finds free admittance given!"

BLACKBIRDS.

“Sing a song o’ sixpence, a pocket full of rye ;
Four and twenty blackbirds baked in a pie :
When the pie was opened, they all began to sing,
And was n’t this a dainty dish to set before the king ?
The king was in his counting-house, counting out his money ;
The queen was in the parlor, eating bread and honey ;
The maid was in the garden, hanging out the clothes,
And along came a blackbird, and nipt off her nose !”

It does n’t take a conjurer to see
The sort of curious pasty this might be ;
A flock of flying rumors, caught alive,
And housed, like swarming bees within a hive,—

Instead of what were far more wisely done,

Having their worthless necks wrung, every one ;—

And so a dish of dainty gossip making,

Smooth covered with a show of secrecy,
That one but takes the pleasant pains of breaking,

And out the wide-mouthed knaves pop, eagerly.

Blackbirds, indeed! Each chattering on- dit

Comes forth, full feathered, black as black can be ;

With quivering throats, all tremulous to sing,

And please, forsooth, some little social king ;

Whose reign may last as long as he is able
To call his court around a dinner-table.

But, mark the sequel! When the laugh is over,

Think not to get the varlets under cover :
The crust once broken, you may seek in vain
To catch the birds, or coax them in again ;
Mrs. Pandora's famous box, I wis,
Was nothing worse than such a pie as this :
And so, some pleasant morning,—when,
down town,

The king is busy with his bags of money,
Leaving at home the queenly Mrs. Brown Safe at her breakfast of fair bread and honey,—

Some quiet, harmless soul, who never knows

Of any matters, save the plain pursuing

Her daily round,—the hanging out of clothes

Or other lawful work she may be doing,—
Finds, by the sudden nipping of her nose,
What sort of mischief is about her brewing !

Not that, indeed, there's anything to hinder
The thieves from flying though the parlor window ;

For never yet could sentinel or warden
Keep scandals wholly to the kitchen garden.

When, therefore, as not seldom it may be,
Even in the soberest community,
Strange revelations somehow get about,—
Like a mysterious cholera breaking out

Sudden, as Egypt's blains 'neath Aaron's rod,
Contagious by a whisper or a nod,—

When daily papers teem with many a hint
That daubs them darker even than their print ;

When it would seem, in short, the very D——

Had let his little imps out on a spree ;
Conclude, beyond a reasonable doubt,
Although, perhaps, you fail to trace it out,
Such plagues spring not unbidden from the ground,

And, if the thing were sifted, 't would be found

Somebody's sown a pocket full of rye,
Or been regaling on a blackbird pie !

BANBURY CROSS.

“ Ride a fine horse
To Banbury Cross,
To see a young woman
Jump on a white horse.
Rings on her fingers,
And bells on her toes,
And she shall have music
Wherever she goes.”

PROPHETIC Dame ! What hadst thou in thy view ?

A modern wedding in Fifth Avenue ?

Where,—like the goddess of a heathen shrine,

With offerings heaped in such a glittering show

As must have emptied a Peruvian mine,

And would suggest, but that we better know,

Marriage must be a bitter thing indeed,

And, like the Prophet of the Eastern tale,
Must wear a very ugly face, to need

Such careful shrouding in the silver veil,—

Her bridal pomp, as a white palfrey, mounting,

Caparisoned at cost beyond all counting,

With diamond-jewelled fingers, and the toes

Ditto, for all that anybody knows,

The smiling damsel goeth to the Banns?
(Why add the "bury," or suggest the "cross,"

As if such brilliant ringing of the hands
Preluded aught of trial or of loss?)

Shall not Life's golden bells still tinkle sweet,

And merry music make about her feet?
Shall not the silver sheen around her spread,
A lasting light along her pathway shed?

No mocking satire, surely, hides a sting,
Nor bitter irony a truth foreshows,
In the gay chant the cheery dame doth
sing, —

"She shall have music wheresoe'er she goes"?

She shall have music ! Shall she sit apart,
And let the folly-chimes outvoice the tone

That comes up wailing to the listening heart,

From the great world, where misery
maketh moan ?

Ah, Mother Goose ! if such the tale it tells,
Sing us no more your rhyme of rings and bells !

But may not—'t were a rare device in—deed !—

The wondrous oracle in both ways read ?
And call up, as a fair beatitude,
The gracious vision of true womanhood,
That with pure purpose, and a gentle might,
Upheld and borne, as by the steed of white,

Pledged with her golden ring, goes nobly forth

To trace her path of joy along the earth,—
And, as she moves, makes music, silver-shod
“With preparation of the peace” of God,
That holds the key-note of celestial cheer,
And hangs heaven’s echoes round her footsteps here ?

ATTIC SALT.

“ Two little blackbirds sat upon a hill,
One named Jack, the other named Jill.
Fly away, Jack ! fly away, Jill !
Come again, Jack ! come again, Jill ! ”

I HALF suspect that, after all,
There's just the smallest bit
Of inequality between
The witling and the wit.
'Tis only mental nimbleness :
No language ever brought
A living word to soul of man
But had the latent thought.

You may meet, among the million,
Good people every day, —
Unconscious martyrs to their fate, —
Who seem, in half they say,
On the brink of something brilliant
They were almost sure to clinch,
Yet, by some queer freak of fortune,
Just escape it by an inch!

I often think the selfsame shade, —
This difference of a hair, —
Doth still divide the men of nought
From those who do and dare.
Then cometh an instant on the wing,
And it beareth a kingly crown:
And this man dazzles and lets it by —
That seizes and brings it down.

Wingéd things to any door-way
May stoop, alighting low;
And up and down, 'twixt earth and sky,
Do always come and go.
Swift, fluttering glimpses touch us all,
Yet, prithee, what avails?
'Tis only Genius that can put
The salt upon their tails!

THE BIG SHOE.

"There was an old woman
Who lived in a shoe;
She had so many children
She did n't know what to do:
To some she gave broth,
And to some she gave bread,
And some she whipped soundly,
And sent them to bed."

Do you find out the likeness?
A portly old Dame,—
The mother of millions,—
Britannia by name:

And — howe'er it may strike you
In reading the song —
Not stinted in space
For bestowing the throng;
Since the Sun can himself
Hardly manage to go,
In a day and a night,
From the heel to the toe.

On the arch of the instep
She builds up her throne,
And, with seas rolling under,
She sits there alone;
With her heel at the foot
Of the Himmalehs planted,
And her toe in the icebergs,
Unchilled and undaunted.

Yet though justly of all
Her fine family proud,
'Tis no light undertaking
To rule such a crowd ;
Not to mention the trouble
Of seeing them fed,
And dispensing with justice
The broth and the bread.
Some will seize upon one,—
Some are left with the other,—
And so the whole household
Gets into a pother.
But the rigid old Dame
Has a summary way
Of her own, when she finds
There is mischief to pay.
She just takes up the rod,
As she lays down the spoon,

And makes their rebellious backs

Tingle right soon :

Then she bids them, while yet

The sore smarting they feel,

To lie down, and go to sleep,

Under her heel !

Only once was she posed, —

When the little boy Sam,

Who had always, before

Been as meek as a lamb,

Refused to take tea,

As his mother had bid,

And returned saucy answers

Because he was chid.

Not content even then,

He cut loose from the throne,

And set about making
A shoe of his own ;
Which succeeded so well,
And was filled up so fast,
That the world, in amazement,
Confessed, at the last, —
Looking on at the work
With a gasp and a stare, —
That 't was hard to tell which
Would be best of the pair.

Side by side they are standing
Together to-day ;
Side by side may they keep
Their strong foothold for aye :
And beneath the broad sea,
Whose blue depths intervene,
May the finishing string
Lie unbroken between !

VICTUALS AND DRINK.

"There once was a woman,
And what do you think?
She lived upon nothing
But victuals and drink.
Victuals and drink
Were the chief of her diet,
And yet this poor woman
Scarce ever was quiet."

And were you so foolish
As really to think
That all she could want
Was her victuals and drink?

And that while she was furnished
With that sort of diet,
Her feeling and fancy
Would starve, and be quiet?

Mother Goose knew far better;
But thought it sufficient
To give a mere hint
That the fare was deficient;
For I do not believe
She could ever have meant
To imply there was reason
For being content.

Yet the mass of mankind
Is uncommonly slow
To acknowledge the fact
It behooves them to know;

Or to learn that a woman
Is not like a mouse,
Needing nothing but cheese,
And the walls of a house.

But just take a man,—
Shut him up for a day ;
Get his hat and his cane,—
Put them snugly away ;
Give him stockings to mend,
And three sumptuous meals ;—
And then ask him, at night,
If you dare, how he feels !
Do you think he will quietly
Stick to the stocking,
While you read the news,
And “ don’t care about talking ” ?

O, many a woman
Goes starving, I ween,
Who lives in a palace,
And fares like a queen ;
Till the famishing heart,
And the feverish brain,
Have spelled out to life's end
The long lesson of pain.

Yet, stay ! To my mind
An uneasy suggestion
Comes up, that there may be
Two sides to the question.
That, while here and there proving Inflicted privation,
The verdict must often be
" Wilful starvation."

Since there are men and women
Would force one to think
They choose to live only
On victuals and drink.

O restless, and craving,
Unsatisfied hearts,
Whence never the vulture
Of hunger departs !
How long on the husks
Of your life will ye feed,
Ignoring the soul,
And her famishing need ?

Bethink you, when lulled
In your shallow content,
'T was to Lazarus only
The angels were sent ;

And 't is he to whose lips
But earth's ashes are given,
For whom the full banquet
Is gathered in heaven!

COBWEBBS AND BROOMS.

“There was an old woman
Tossed up in a blanket,
Seventeen times as high as the moon ;
What she did there
I cannot tell you,
But in her hand she carried a broom.
Old woman, old woman,
Old woman, said I,
O whither, O whither, O whither so high ?
To sweep the cobwebs
Off the sky,
And I’ll be back again, by and by.”

MIND you, she wore no wings,
That she might truly soar ; no time was lost

In growing such unnecessary things ;
But blindly, in a blanket, she was tost !

Spasmodically, too !
'T was not enough that she should reach the moon ;
But seventeen times the distance she must do,
Lest, peradventure, she get back too soon.

That emblematic broom !
Besom of mad Reform, uplifted high,
That, to reach cobwebs, would precipitate doom,
And sweep down thunderbolts from out the sky !

Doubtless, no rubbish lay
About her door, — no work was there to do, —
That through the astonished aisles of Night and Day,
She took her valorous flight in quest of new!

Lo ! at her little broom
The great stars laugh, as on their wheels of fire
They go, dispersing the eternal gloom,
And shake Time's dust from off each blazing tire !

BLACK SPIDERS.

“ Little Miss Muffet
Sat on a tuffet,
Eating curds and whey :
There came a black spider,
And sat down beside her,
And frightened Miss Muffet away.”

To all mortal blisses,
From comfits to kisses,
There 's sure to be something by way of alloy ;
Each new expectation
Brings fresh aggravation,
And a doubtful amalgam 's the best of our joy.

You may sit on your tuffet;
Yes, — cushion and stuff it;
And provide what you please, if you don't fancy whey;
But before you can eat it,
There'll be — I repeat it —
Some sort of black spider to come in the way.

DAFFY~DOWN~DILLY.

“Daffy-down-dilly
Is new come to town,
With a petticoat green,
And a bright yellow gown,
And her little white blossoms
Are peeping around.”

Now don't you call this
A most exquisite thing?
Don't it give you a thrill
With the thought of the spring,
Such as once, in your childhood,
You felt, when you found

The first yellow buttercups
Spangling the ground?

When the lilac was fresh
With its glory of leaves,
And the swallows came fluttering
Under the eaves?

When the bluebird flashed by
Like a magical thing,
And you looked for a fairy
Astride of his wing?

When the clear, running water,
Like tinkling of bells,
Bore along the bare roadside
A song of the dells,—
And the mornings were fresh
With unfailing delight,

While the sweet summer hush
 Always came with the night?

O daffy-down-dilly,
 With robings of gold!
 As our hearts every year
 To your coming unfold,
 And sweet memories stir
 Through the hardening mould,
 We feel how earth's blossomings
 Surely are given
 To keep the soul fresh
 For the spring-time of heaven!

BAA, BAA, BLACK SHEEP!

"Baa, baa, black sheep!

Have you any wool?

Yes, sir, — no, sir, —

Three bags full.

One for my master,

One for my dame,

And one for the little boy

That lives in the lane."

'T is the same question as of old;

And still the doubter saith,

"Can any good be made to come

From out of Nazareth?"

No sheep so black in all the flock,—
No human heart so bare,—
But hath some warm and generous stock
Of kindness to share.

It may be treasured secretly
For dear ones at the hearth;
Or be bestowed by stealth along
The by-ways of the earth;—

And though no searching eye may see,
Nor busy tongue may tell,
Perchance, where largest love is laid,
The Master knoweth well!

THE TWISTER.

"A twister, in twisting, would twist him a twist,
And, twisting his twists, seven twists he doth twist:
If one twist, in twisting, untwist from the twist,
The twist, untwisting, untwists the twist."

A RAVELLED rainbow overhead
Lets down to life its varying thread:
Love's blue,—Joy's gold,—and, fair between,
Hope's shifting light of emerald green;
With, either side, in deep relief,
A crimson Pain,—a violet Grief

Wouldst thou, amid their gleaming hues,
Clutch after those, and these refuse?
Believe,—as thy beseeching eyes
Follow their lines, and sound the skies,—
There, where the fadeless glories shine,
An unseen angel twists the twine.

And be thou sure, what tint soe'er
The broken rays beneath may wear,
It needs them all, that, broad and white,
God's love may weave the perfect light!

FANTASY.

"I have a little sister,
They call her peep, peep ;
She wades through the water,
Deep, deep, deep ;
She climbs up the mountains,
High, high, high ;
My poor little sister,
She has but one eye !"

ROUGH Common Sense doth here confess
Her kinship to Imagination ;
Betraying also, I should guess,
Some little pride in the relation.

For even while vexed, and puzzled too,
By the vagaries of the latter,—
Fearful what next the child may do,—
She looks with loving wonder at her.

Plain Sense keeps ever to the road
That's beaten down and daily trod;
While Fancy fords the rivers wide,
And scrambles up the mountain-side:
By which exploits she's always getting
Either a tumble or a wetting.

While simple Sense looks straight before,
Fancy "peeps" further, and sees more;
And yet, if left to walk alone,
May chance, like most long-sighted people,
To trip her foot against a stone
While gazing at a distant steeple.

Nay, worse ! with all her grace erratic,
And feats aerial and aquatic,
Her flights sublime, and moods ecstatic,
She of the vision wild and high

Hath but a solitary eye !

And, — not to quote the Scripture, which Forebodes the falling in the ditch, —
Doubtless by following such a guide
Blindly, in all her wanderings wide,
The world, at best, would get o' one side.

What then ? To rid us of our doubt

Is there no other thing to do

But we must turn poor Fancy out,
And only downright Fact pursue ?

Ah, see you not, bewildered man !

The heavenly beauty of the plan ?

'T was so ordained, in counsels high,
To give to sweet Imagination
A single deep and glorious eye ;
But then 't was meant, in compensation,
That Common Sense, with optics keen, —
As maid of honor to a queen, —
On her blind side should always stay,
And keep her in the middle way.

JINGLING AND JANGLING.

“ Little Jack Jingle
Used to live single.
But when he got tired
Of that kind of life,
He left off being single,
And lived with his wife.”

YOUR period's pointed, most excellent Mother!

Pray what did he do when he tired of the other?

For a man so deplorably prone to ennui
But a queer sort of husband is likely to be.

The fatigue might recur,—and, in case it should be so,

Why not take a wife on a limited lease, O?
Grant the privilege, pray, to his idiosyn-crasy,—

Some natures won't bear to be too closely pinned, you see,—

And, at worst, the poor Benedict might advertise,

When weary, at length, of the light of his eyes,—

Or failing to find her, it may be, in salt,—

“Disposed of, indeed, for no manner of fault,”

(To borrow a figure of speech from the mart,)

“But because the late owner has taken a start!”

I believe once before you have cautiously said

Something quite as concise on this delicate head,

When distantly hinting at "needles and pins,"

And that "when a man marries, his trouble begins";

But I don't recollect that you ever pretend
To prophesy anything as to the end.

Unless we may learn it of Peter,—the bumpkin,

Renowned for naught else but his eating of pumpkin;

Whose wife—I don't see how he happened to get her—

Had a taste, very likely, for things that were better:

Since, fearing to lose her, at last it befell

He bethought him of shutting her up in a shell ;

By which brilliant contrivance she kept very well !

What he did with her next, the tradition
don't say,

But she seems to be somehow got out of the way,

For the ill-fated Peter was wedded once more,

To find his bewilderment worse than before ;

If the first for her spouse had but small predilection,

Now 't was his turn, alas ! to fall short in affection.

And how do you think that he conquered
the evil?

Why, simply by lifting himself to her level;
By leaving his pumpkins, and learning to spell,

He came, saith the story, to love her right
well;

And the mythical memoir its moral contrives

For the lasting instruction of husbands and wives.

THE OLD WOMAN OF SURREY.

"There was an old woman in Surrey,
Who was morn, noon, and night in a hurry;
Called her husband a fool,
Drove the children to school,
The worrying old woman of Surrey."

'T WAS an ancient earldom over the sea,
And it must be now as it used to be ;
Yet the sketch is of one I have known before, —
The very old woman that lives next door.

One thing is unquestionable,—she 's “smart,” —

As they say of an apple that's rather tart;
For her nearest friends, I think, would allow her

To be, at her best, but a “pleasant sour.”

There's a certain electrical atmosphere
That you feel beforehand, when she 's near:
And — unless you've a wonderful deal of pluck —

A shrinking fear that you might be “struck.”

She moves with such a bustle and rush,—
Such an elemental stir and crush,
As makes the branches bent and fall
In the breeze that blows up a thunder-squall.

And yet, it is only her endless "hurry";
She's not so bad if she would n't "worry,"
And, for all the worlds that she has to make,
If the six days' time she'd only take.

You may talk about Surrey, or Devon, or Kent,

But I doubt if a special location was meant;
It may sound severe, — but it seems to me
That a "representative" woman was she;

And that here and there you may chance to trace

Some specimens extant of the race:
For a slip of the stock, as I've a notion, Somehow "in the Mayflower" crossed the ocean.

PICKLE PEPPERS.

* Peter Piper picked a peck of pickle peppers ;
And a peck of pickle peppers Peter Piper picked ;
If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickle peppers
Where's the peck of pickle peppers Peter Piper picked ? ”

Poor Peter toiled his life away,
That afterward the world might say “ Where is the peck of peppers he Did gather so industriously ? ”
The peppers are embalmed in metre, —
But who, alas ! inquires for Peter ?

In sun or storm, by night and day,
Scant time for sleep, and none for play,
Still the poor fool did nothing reck,
If only he might pick his peck :
And what result from all hath sprung,
But just to bite somebody's tongue ?
Or, — Lady Fortune playing fickle, —
Get some one in a precious pickle ?

HUMPTY DUMPTY.

"Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall :

Humpty Dumpty had a great fall :

Not all the king's horses nor all the king's men
Could set Humpty Dumpty up again."

FULL many a project that never was hatched Falls down, and gets shattered beyond being patched ;

And luckily, too ! for if all came to chickens,

Then things without feathers might go to the dickens.

If each restless unit that moves among men
Might climb to a place with the privileged “ten,”

Pray tell us where all the commotion would stop!

Must the whole pan of milk, forsooth, rise to the top?

If always the statesman attained to his hopes,
And grasped the great helm, who would stand by the ropes?

Or if all dainty fingers their duties might choose,

Who would wash up the dishes, and polish
the shoes?

Suppose every aspirant writing a book
Contrived to get published, by hook or by crook;

Geologists then of a later creation
Would be startled, I fancy, to find a formation

Proving how the poor world did most wo-fully sink

Beneath mountains of paper, and oceans of ink !

Or even suppose all the women were married ;

By whom would superfluous babies be carried ?

Where would be the good aunts that should knit all the stockings ?

Or nurses, to do up the singings and rockings ?

Wise spinsters, to lay down their wonderful rules,

And with theories rare to enlighten the fools, —

Or to look after orphans, and primary schools?

No! Failure's a part of the infinite plan;
Who finds that he can't, must give way to who can;

And as one and another drops out of the race,

Each stumbles at last to his suitable place.

So the great scheme works on, — though,
like eggs from the wall,

Little single designs to such ruin may fall,
That not all the world's might, of its horses or men,

Could set their crushed hopes at the summit again.

SUNDAY AND MONDAY.

" As Tommy Snooks and Bessy Brooks
Were walking out one Sunday,
Says Tommy Snooks to Bessy Brooks,
To-morrow will be Monday."

No doubt you are smiling at such a remark,
And thinking poor Snooks but a pitiful spark ;
But the words have a meaning, worth looking for, too,
As I'll presently try and demonstrate for you.

'Twas a pity, indeed, in that moment of leisure,
To dampen poor Bessy's hebdomadal pleasure,
Suggesting that close on the beautiful Sunday
Must come all the common-place horrors of Monday ;

That he to his toiling, and she to her tub,
Must turn, and take up with another week's rub ;
Yet a truth for us all, since the shade of the real
Follows fast on the track of each sunny ideal.

Now and then we may pause on Life's pleasant oases ;

But between lie the desert's grim, desolate spaces ;

And our feet, with all patience, must traverse them still,

Reaching forward to blessing, through bearing of ill.

Yet for Snooks and his Bessy,—for me
'and for you,—

Comes a Saturday night when the wage will be due ;

And we'll say to each other, in ecstasy,
one day,

“To-morrow—the endless to-morrow—is Sunday !”

THE MAD HORSE.

“There was a mad man,
And he had a mad wife,
And the children were mad beside;
So on a mad horse
They all of them got,
And madly away did ride.”

SAGACIOUS Goose! Fresh wonders yet!
What spell had power to help you get .
Those seven-leagued spectacles, that see
Down to the nineteenth century?

“The mad world, and his madder wife!”
That, in your earlier time of life, —
Though quite demented now, 't is plain, —
Were sober, grave, and almost sane!

And all the tribes, a motley brood
Sprung into being since the flood,
With their hereditary bent
To cerebral bewilderment!

If some old ghost, precise and slow,
Who died a hundred years ago, —
Always supposing he himself
Has lain, meanwhile, upon the shelf, —

Things as they are might only see,
Surely his inference would be
A simultaneous bursting out
Of lunacy the earth about.

“The world is mad; his wife is mad;
The rising generation’s madder;”
And when a charter can be had,
Up to the moon they’ll build a ladder!

They caught a horse awhile ago, —
They called him Steam, — but he was slow;
After the lightning then they ran,
Caught him, — and now they drive the span! — 1860.

P. S. — 1870.

The great Pacific railroad 's done;
They 've poured two oceans into one;
Two shores with whispering cable tied,
And cut a path for ships to ride,
Where camel-tracks had used to be,
Through desert sands, from sea to sea.

Moon, quoth I? Faith, they 've made a moon!
Leastwise, they 've thought one; and so soon.

Upon man's whim his stroke succeeds,
And turns his dreams into his deeds,
Look sharply! for with word and blow,
They 'll swing one up before you know!

JACK HORNER.

“Little Jack Horner
Sat in a corner
Eating a Christmas Pie:
He put in his thumb,
And pulled out a plum,
And said, ‘What a great boy am I!’”

AN, the world hath many a Horner,
Who, seated in his corner, Finds a Christmas Pie provided for his thumb:

And cries out with exultation,
When successful exploration
Doth discover the predestinated plum!

Little Jack outgrows his tier,
And becometh John, Esquire;
And he finds a monstrous pasty ready made,
Stuffed with stocks and bonds and bales,
Gold, currencies and sales,
And all the mixed ingredients of Trade.

And again it is his luck
To be just in time to pluck,
By a clever "operation," from the pie
An unexpected "plum";
So he glorifies his thumb,
And says, proudly, "What a mighty man am I!"

Or perchance, to Science turning,
And with weary labor learning
All the formulas and phrases that oppress her, —

For the fruit of others' baking
So a fresh diploma taking,
Comes he forth, a full accredited Professor!

Or he 's not too nice to mix
In the dish of politics;
And the dignity of office he puts on;
And he feels as big again
As a dozen nobler men,
While he writes himself the Honorable John!

Ah, me, for the poor nation!
In her hour of desperation
Her worst foe is that unsparing Horner-Thumb!

To which War, and Death, and Hate,
Right, Policy, and State,
Are but pies wherefrom his greed may grasp a plum!

Oh, the work was fair and true,
But 't is riddled through and through,
And plundered of its glories everywhere;
And before men's cheated eyes
Doth the robber triumph rise
And magnify itself in all the air.

Why, if even a good man dies,
And is welcomed to the skies
In the glorious resurrection of the just,
They must ruffle it below
With some vain and wretched show,
To make each his little mud-pie of the dust!

Shall we hint at Lady-Horners,
Who in their exclusive corners Think the world is only made of upper-crust?

Who in the queer mince-pie
That we call Society,
Do their dainty fingers delicately thrust;

Till, if it come to pass,
In the spiced and sugared mass,
One should compass, — do n't they call it
sò? — a catch,

By the gratulation given
It would seem the very heaven
Had outdone itself in making such a match!

Or the Womian-Horner, now,
Who is raising such a row
To prove that Jack's no bigger boy than Jill;

And that she wo n't sit by
With her little saucer pie,
While he from the Great Pasty picks his fill.

Jealous-wild to be a sharer
In the fruit she thinks the fairer,

Flings by all for the swift gaining of her wish;

Not discerning in her blindness,
How a tender Loving-Kindness
Hid the best things in her own rejected dish!

O, the world keeps Christmas Day
In a queer, perpetual way;
Shouting always, "What a great big boy am I!"

Yet how many of the crowd
Thus vociferating loud,
And their honors or pretensions lifting
high,
Have really, more than lack,
With their boldness or their knack,
Had a finger in the making of the Pie?

INTY, MINTY.

"Inty, minty,
Cutey, corn !
Apple-seed,
Apple-thorn !
Wire, brier,
Limber lock ;
Seven geese
In a flock,
Sit and sing, by the spring ;
O-u-t, out, and in again."

INKLINGS and meanings,
Whispers and hints ;
Sprinklings and gleanings,
Shimmers and glints.

That 's how the light comes Down from the skies;
That 's how the beauty
Is born to our eyes.

The seed is within,
And the thorn is without:
Nature's sweet secret
Is guarded about.
Yet briers are slender,
Locks are but slight,
To touch of a genius
That searches with light.

White by the fountain
Sit the calm seven;
Unto their joyance
Its music is given.

The world looketh on,
And still wonders in vain,
As they go out and in,
And find pasture again.

DOUBLES AND BUBBLES.

"Hey, rub-a-dub!

Three maids in a tub!

And who do you think was there?

The butcher, the baker,

The candlestick-maker,

And all of them gone to the fair."

STRONG hands are in the washing-tubs;

Gay heads, the labor scorning,

Make holiday between the rubs,

And sport of Monday morning.

Three maids? That 's your arithmetic.

The child that met the poet

Would still to her own counting stick:

"We 're seven; I surely know it!"

The boatman ferried over three
Across the haunted river;
And only guessed it by his fee,
And wondered at the giver.

And Betsey, Jane, and Mary Ann, —
No more your sense discovers?
Well, rub your insight if you can,
And reckon up the lovers!

Count Jane with her stout cleaver knight,
And Betsey with the baker;
And Mary Ann in dreamy light
Beside the candle-maker.

Yet of the six no soul is there,
For all your wakened vision!
In the charmed circle of the Fair
They walk their Fields Elysian!

The work goes on by board and bench, —
Hard tax of human sinning, —
But hearts thro' labor-chinks still wrench
Some joy of their beginning.

In the close limit that confines
Our getting and our giving,
Unless we read between the lines,
What should we do with living?

FUNERAL HOLIDAY.

"Ding, dong, bell,
The cat's in the well!
Who put her in? Little John Green.
Who pulled her out? Great John Stout!"

THERE was never a drama of sorrow
But good folks might be found, I'm afraid,
Who a queer satisfaction could borrow
From the parts of importance they played.

There is war for four years in the nation:
There are havoc and panic abroad:
Comes a tempest; a wild conflagration:
Great souls go up home to their God.

How the tall I's spring thick in the spelling! —

I knew, or I saw, or I said! —

How the small ones turn out to the swelling
Each splendor of final parade!

How many are left, we may wonder,
Heart-mournful for that which befell?
How many would wish back the blunder
When the Cat has got into the Well!

Nay, more; if with infinite bother
And peril, poor Puss is got out,
Somehow, one boy seems famous as t' other,
John Green is as big as John Stout!

See, now! let me tell you a story
Of something which happened in sooth;
That shows with how fearless a glory
The children and simple speak truth.

Biddy came to her mistress refulgent;

A whole sunrise of smiles on her face;

With "M'am, could ye be so indulgent

Jist to shpare me the day, if ye plase?

"It's me cousin that's dead, — Kate

M'Gawtherin, —

Was married to Barnaby Roach;

An' I'd want, — but I hates to be both-erin', —

Three shillin's to pay for the coach!"

And so we were minus our dinners;

And all that deplorable day

We fasted, like penitent sinners,

While Biddy the cook was away.

But she came when the sunset was gleam-
ing;

And her story she gleefully told;

Disdaining all dolorous seeming,

In a way that was good to behold.

Each loving and sad recollection
Of the late Mrs. Barnaby Roach
Quite absorbed in the single reflection
That she "wint wid himsel' in the coach!"

"For he thrated me, faith, like a lady,
An' he paid me me fare, an' ahl;
An' he tould me that I, Bridget Brady,
Was the charm of the funeral!"

DISROBED.

“ There was a little woman, as I ’ve heard tell,
She went to market her eggs for to sell :
She went to market all on a market day,
And she fell asleep on the king’s highway.

“ There came a little peddler, his name was Stout ;
He cut off her petticoats round about :
He cut off her petticoats up to her knees,
And the poor little woman began for to freeze.

“ She began to shiver, and she began to cry,
Lawk-a-mercy on me ! sure it is n’t I !
But if it be I, as I think it ought to be,
I ’ve got a little dog at home, and he knows me ! ”

I THINK of a poor, tired Soul,
That has trodden, up and down,
The tradeways of this busy life,
To and from its market town,

Till, traffic and toil all past,
At the silent close of the day,
She lies down, weary and worn, at last,
On the king's highway; —

The highway that brings all home,
Never a one left out; —
And in her sleep doth a Stranger come
Who cuts her garments about.
Cuts the life-tatters away,
All the old rags and the stain;
And leaves the Soul 'twixt her night and day,
To waken again.

Slowly she wakens, and strange;
Strange and scared she doth seem;
Marvelling at the mystical change
Come over her in her dream.

"Where is my life?" she cries,
"That which I knew me by?
Something is here in an unknown guise:
Can it be I?

"I wonder if anything is:
Or if I am anything:
Did ever a Soul come bare as this
From its earthward marketing?
Let me think down into the past;
Bethink me hard in the cold;
Find me something to stand by fast;
Something to hold!"

She thinks away back to the morning,
To something she loved and knew;
And over her doubt comes dawning
Sense of the dear and true.

"I do n't know if it be I," she sighs;

"But if after all it be,

There 's a little heart at home in the skies,

And he 'll know me!"

JACK AND JILL.

“ Jack and Jill
Went up the hill,
To draw a pail of water :
Jack fell down
And broke his crown,
And Jill came tumbling after.”

JACK and Jill went up the hill,
When the world was young, together.
Jack and Jill went up the hill,
In Eden ways and weather.
She to seek out blessed springs,
He to bear the burden :
Nature their sole choice of things,
Love their only guerdon.
That was all the simple creatures knew.

Jack and Jill come down the hill,
In the world's full years, together.
Jack and Jill come down the hill,
And there is stormy weather.
'T is all about the pail, you see;
The sweet springs are behind them:
Empty-handed seemeth she
Who only helped to find them.
Jill would like to swing a bucket, too.

O'er the hillside coming down,
Eagerly and proudly,
Sparkling trophies to the town
To bear, she clamors loudly.
But, in face of all the town,
Challenging its laughter,
Many a Jack comes tumbling down.
Shall the Jills come after?
Is that what the women want to do?

Listen! When on heights of life
Hidden pools He planted,
God to Adam and his wife
Wise division granted.
Gave his son the pitcher broad
For wealth and weight of water;
But the quick divining-rod
Confided to his daughter.
Ah, if men and women only knew!

CASUS BELLI.

IMPROMPTU, JULY, 1870.

“The sow came in with the saddle;
The little pig rocked the cradle;
The dish jumped up on the table
To see the pot swallow the ladle;
The spit that stood behind the door
Threw the pudding-stick on the floor.

‘Odsplut!’ said the gridiron,

Can’t you agree?

I’m the head constable,

Bring ‘em to me.’”

SPAIN came in with an empty throne;
The little prince rocked his German cradle.

“No, no,” he said;

And he shook his head;

“I am well content to be let alone.”

All the dishes on pantry-ledge
And shelf, and table, were up on edge,
 To see how the Pot,
 Simmering hot,
Would foam at the dip of the threatening ladle.

Nothing befell for a minute or so (Nobody chose to be first, you know),
Till the royal spit, with an angry frown,
Threw a little pudding-stick down.
"Odsplut!" shouts Emperor Gridiron,
 Hissing for a broil,
"Those folks that stand behind the door
 Are getting up a coil!
I 've red Fire panting at my feet;
 I thought how things would be!
I 'm creation's constable,
 Bring the world to me!"

THE DAYS THAT ARE LONG.

"I'll sing you a song
Of the days that are long ;
Of the woodcock and the sparrow ;
Of the little dog
That burnt his tail,
And he shall be whipt to-morrow."

THAT is the song the world sings
Of the long bright days:
That is the way she evens things,
Portions, and pays.

The dog that let his tail burn,
Proving one pain,
Shall be whipt next day, that he may learn
Wisdom again.

That is the song the world sings
To sin and sorrow:
Over her limit her hard lash flings
Into God's morrow.

Measures His dear divine grace
In compass narrow:
Counts for nothing the infinite days;
Forgets the sparrow.

The world sings only a half song;
Leaves our hearts sore:
Heaven, in the time that is tender and long,
Will sing us more.

THREESCORE AND TEN.

"How many miles to Babylon?

Threescore and ten.

Can I get there by candle-light?

Yes, and back again."

How many miles of the weary way?

Threescore miles and ten.

Where shall I be at the end of the day?

You shall be back again.

You shall prove it all in the lifelong round;

The joy, and the pain and the sinning;

And at candle-light your soul shall be found

Back — at its new beginning.

Down in his grave the old man lies;
In from the earthward wild,
At the open door of Paradise
Enters a little child.

CONCLUSION.

DOUBTLESS I might go on to quote,
With added paraphrase and note,
Enough of rhymes to fill a scroll,
That, bundled up, should be a roll
As bulky as a broad-brimmed hat,
But "verbum sapienti sat!"
Suffice it to have struck the vein,
And shown some specimens of ore;
If any seek for further gain,
The mine still holds abundance more.
A mental pickaxe and a biggin
Are all you need to go to diggin'.

For, as the Swedish seer contends,
All things comprise an inner sense;
There's nothing we can write or say,
In howsoever simple way,
But seems a body, built to hide
The soul that straightway is supplied;
And many a fool, and prophet too,
Hath spoken wiser than he knew.

One parting word, and I am gone:
If I've prevailed to make you see
These things as they appear to me,
Then have I proved my Goose a Swan;
And I, small fledgling of the line,
Yet proud to bear the ancient name,
May, for this ancestress of mine,
Claim place upon the page of fame; —
That not a bard of Saxon tongue
More true to nature ever sung:

More surely soothed, more deeply taught,
Or passing fact more keenly caught;
And that — exalted side by side
With him of Avon, in the pride
And love of millions — we should lay
The tribute at her feet to-day
That owns her, in this latter age,
Goose, truly, — but, in savor, Sage!

